Paul H Sutherland CFP : AMA Physicians' Guide to Financial Planning before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised AMA Physicians' Guide to Financial Planning:

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Not bad, lots of hypeBy Matthew P. JarvisThis book had some good information and could have been a great book if it didn't contain so many plugs for the author's mutual funds (that later collapsed). It also had several rants typical of NAPFA members.4 of 6 people found the following review helpful. Good overview, but belittles do-it-yourselfBy Mike BroylesI had expectations that this book would help me prepare for going into practice next year. I'm finishing residency and really hate the series of financial planners coming through to help me with my money. Unfortunately, their bias also includes finding ways to help themselves to part of my money. Most physicians are intelligent and capable of handling their own money, but we've been led on to believe we are so busy and overwhelmed that we should entrust another professional to do it for us. This book was correct to steer everyone away from commission-driven financial planners. However, it was way too quick in suggesting we are too overwhelmed to do it ourselves and should find a planner like the hourly fee-based author. Moreover, for those of us capable of doing it ourselves, the book suggests we are unable to objectively review investment vehicles and should stick to funds sold by the author's company. Thanks for the help, but not quite what the doctor ordered.

Offers tools tailored to help physicians and their families manage day-to-day financial issues. This guide provides advice on financial planning, saving, investing, self-guided portfolio management, obtaining loans and mortgages, buying and selling real estate, retirement, estate planning and many other aspects of money and investment.
