

[Get free] The Gift of Caring: Saving Our Parents from the Perils of Modern Healthcare

The Gift of Caring: Saving Our Parents from the Perils of Modern Healthcare

Marcy Cottrell Houle M.S., Elizabeth Eckstrom M.D. M.P.H., Jennie Chin Hansen
ePub | *DOC | audiobook | ebooks | Download PDF

#54665 in Books 2015-07-01Original language:EnglishPDF # 1 9.27 x 1.11 x 6.31l, .0 #File Name:
1493010034320 pages | File size: 48.Mb

Marcy Cottrell Houle M.S., Elizabeth Eckstrom M.D. M.P.H., Jennie Chin Hansen : The Gift of Caring: Saving Our Parents from the Perils of Modern Healthcare before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Gift of Caring: Saving Our Parents from the Perils of Modern Healthcare:

5 of 5 people found the following review helpful. Extraordinary Reference Book For SeniorsBy CustomerThis book is a superb reference book for aging adults as well as their adult children.It is a view of lifersquo;s ending chapters as detailed by an adult daughter who assumed the role of Caregiver. What makes it unusual is that the daughter relates the experiences — often difficult and always challenging — that she and her parents lived through. Then an experienced gerontologist comments upon each of these exigencies and suggests way to better cope with them. The suggestions are specific and can be employed immediately. Especially helpful are lists — without cumbersome verbiage — of how to get better sleep, how to complete a POLST directive; how to prevent falls; how to reduce number of pills prescribed; when to choose palliative care, etc. These topics are often touched upon in other books, but in the Gift of Giving; they are spelled out in enough detail to be extremely helpful. Without qualification, I heartily endorse this book. Dr. Sivia Kaye³ of 3 people found the following review helpful. 5 Stars aren't enough. A 10 star book! By Judith A. Watson This is the BEST book I have ever read on taking care of an elderly parent. It was more than I expected because it also alerted to me about how I can improve my own life as I head into the "senior years." Having recently gone through a painful family crisis with my mother's care, this book helped me see that we did indeed save her from a facility that was giving her too much medication and causing her ongoing problems. The book affirmed our decisions and will be a guide for future decisions for her care and our own. Everyone should read this book because even if we aren't responsible for the care of a parent, we ARE all going to reach those years where we need to make decisions. Being aware of what needs to go right and what could go wrong with our care is half the battle. Thank you to Marcy Houle and Dr. Eckstrom for this wonderful, very readable book. If there were 10 stars to give, I would give it 10 stars! 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Do NOT miss this book!! Worth reading for anyone who has contact with Modern Healthcare, regardless of age or circumstance By hereistand — If yours; you've known one person with Alzheimers; yours; you've known ONE person with Alzheimers; — That's a saying pretty well known in my community - the Community of Alzheimers Caregivers. No two victims of this horrible disease are exactly alike and so, while the symptoms and manifestations of those we care for may be similar to the symptoms of other victims, the order of appearance as well as the reactions to the symptoms may vary greatly between victims AND caregivers alike. But something I've definitely learned in my caregiver journey — you can always learn from the experiences, good and bad, of others. The Gift of Caring takes you on a journey of caregiving and a bumpy ride it is. You are brought along for the ride while the author describes the struggle to provide the best care, medically and emotionally, to first her Father and then, unfortunately, her Mother. In this way, the book differs little from the stories told by other caregivers. But following each section of a chapter or two or three is a chapter which provides the insight of a noted geriatrics physician. What to look for, helpful hints in treatment and even how to avoid, prevent or at least delay the situation. There are stand-alone books by caregivers and there are stand-alone books by physicians but this is the first book I've see where the two sides work in concert to inform the reader. IT WORKS!! Frankly, it is a Home Run. The title implies that it is for the adult offspring of elderly parents and that is much too limiting. The book is worth reading for anyone who has contact with Modern Healthcare, regardless of age or circumstance. I have personally found it much too good to keep to myself and will be purchasing several copies for giftshelling; starting with my two children. Well worth reading and deserving of every one of those Five Stars!!!

In a powerful blending of memoir and practical strategies from a medical doctor's perspective, The Gift of Caring: Saving Our Parents — and ourselves - from the Perils of Modern Healthcare reveals the hidden side of modern healthcare practices for aging Americans. This ground-breaking book, co-written by award-winning author Marcy Houle and nationally-recognized geriatrician and public health advocate, Elizabeth Eckstrom MD MPH, sheds new light on aging by showing it from twin perspectives: the story of a daughter desperately seeking help for the parents she loves, and a geriatrician who offers life-changing strategies that can protect our loved ones and ourselves. Today, for many older adults, the medical delivery system is confusing, fragmented, and ill-equipped to provide comprehensive, person-centered care. Under our current healthcare model, thousands of aging persons face unnecessary suffering, hospitalizations and nursing home stays, and even preventable death. Seniors and families often feel powerless as they travel this sad journey. Not having knowledge of aging's changes, they resign themselves to believing there is nothing anyone can do to help, while some health care professionals simply write off symptoms seniors endure as "just old age." But as Marcy Houle discovered in caring for her parents, many of the problems often are not "just old age." Further, the real issue is not that the answers to ease suffering don't exist. Rather, what we need to know is generally not available to the general public. Even more concerning, many health care professionals have had little or no training in the care of older adults. The Gift of Caring hopes to change that. It is written to give empowerment to all older adults, family members, and health care professionals, by sharing much needed knowledge and practical strategies. The Gift of Caring shows the best ways to advocate for our parents' health care; and our own; by giving us the tools we need to insist upon the better way. Your parents and you deserve the best healthcare as you age- But there are so many reasons why that's not happening. You can change that.

... Eckstrom comes across as knowledgeable, clear and compassionate — the provider everyone's mother should have. Yet few of us will find someone similarly informed. ... In fact, this is a book for everyone — if not this moment, then eventually. It will be a book to keep handy when the elderly in your life become frail; and beyond that, when you yourself begin to forget things and wonder if it's the onset of dementia or when the pill bottles begin to gather by the side of your bed. Reading this just might be the best preventative medicine you can find. (The Oregonian)

This is a remarkable book. The story of Marcy Houle's family's discovery of their father having dementia reads like a novel. So many of the reactions a family can experience during this journey are portrayed in a caring but honest light. Houle's willingness to describe the struggles to accept the diagnosis and help her parents adjust serves as a model for other families facing this challenge. Hers is not a story just of struggle, but one also suffused with love and meaning. Dr. Eckstrom's chapters are very helpful — brief, but written in clear, understandable language, and very accurate. Hearing her approach to patients with dementia will enable readers to know what to look for in a caring and competent physician. (Kenneth Brummel-Smith, MD, Charlotte Edwards Maguire Professor and chair, department of geriatrics, Florida State University College of Medicine)

Houle's story will resonate emotionally with anyone who has cared for a parent or older relative. It also offers a practical guide for readers who are care-giving now and who want to give their loved ones the gift of good care. — SeniorAdvisor.com (Senior Advisor)

Informative, insightful, and clear, The Gift of Caring provides a moving exploration of what growing old means and how we as children, friends, and neighbors should respond. It provides extremely practical advice which serves as a wonderful roadmap to a better way of caring for older adults in America. I cannot recommend it highly enough. (Rachelle Bernacki, MD, MS, director of quality initiatives, Adult Palliative Care, DFCI)

With the growth of the elderly population, particularly those over eighty-five years of age, there is a tremendous need for resources like The Gift of Caring. There is so much to be learned from others who have traveled this road. (Dr. David B. Reuben, chief of Geriatric Medicine, UCLA; past president of the American Geriatric Society; past chair of the board of directors of the American Board of Internal Medicine)

"This is a book for everyone — if not this moment, then eventually. It will be a book to keep handy when the elderly in your life become frail; and beyond that, when you yourself begin to forget things and wonder if it's the onset of dementia or when the pill bottles begin to gather. Reading this just might be the best preventive medicine you can find." (The Oregonian)

"Must Have Book for Caregivers. ... This book has a really interesting approach. Marcy Cottrell Houle — a professional writer — writes a memoir about caring for her Dad with Alzheimers and her frail mother. The story is interspersed with expert advice from Dr. Eckstrom that the author wishes she had known about avoiding pitfalls in our modern healthcare system. It's new and definitely will serve you well." — Anne Tumlinson (Daughterhood.org)

About the Author: Marcy Cottrell Houle, MS, is a biologist and award-winning author. Her book Wings for My Flight won the prestigious Christopher Medal and The Prairie Keepers was a New York Times Notable Book and a Booklist Editors' Choice. She has published articles in the New York Times, Readers' Digest, and Nature Conservancy Magazine, and has been featured on NPR and national television programs and in periodical reviews. She lives in Portland, Oregon.

Elizabeth Eckstrom, MD, MPH, is director of geriatrics in the Division of General Internal Medicine and Geriatrics at Oregon Health and Sciences University (OHSU) and cofounder of the OHSU Healthy Aging Alliance. She has received many honors and recognition for her innovative work. In addition, Dr. Eckstrom is a sought-after national speaker and the author of numerous articles on geriatrics. She lives in Portland, Oregon.