Julian Tudor Hart : The Political Economy of Health Care, Second Edition: Where the NHS Came From and Where It Could Lead (Health Society) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Political Economy of Health Care, Second Edition: Where the NHS Came From and Where

It Could Lead (Health Society):

This bestselling book has been updated to take account of recent changes to policy and practice in the UK's National Health Service. Now in its second edition, the book has been entirely rewritten with two new chapters and a new section on health care's relationship to social justice. Its essential principle is that patients need to develop as active citizens and co-producers of health-gain in a humanizing society. The author's aim is to promote this principle wherever people recognize that the pursuit of profit may be a brake on rational progress.

"...deeply practical...heart-warmingly optimistic." Helen Roberts in Public Health Today "This book is a masterpiece -- a unique combination of fascinating history, top-notch epidemiological science, sharp political analysis, and clinical insight. Scholar and practitioner, both, Julian Tudor Hart's understanding of how we can best pursue health in our communities is second to none." Donald M. Berwick, MD "This is a must-read for all who are interested in healthcare, and who are concerned to protect the fundamental values on which our healthcare system is based at the same time as maximising the potential of new developments." Professor Dame June Clark, ex-President of the Royal College of Nursing, and member of the Wales Assembly Government Bevan Commission on the future of the NHS in Wales "At a time when governments across the world seem ever more determined to expose health services to commercialisation and market forces, Julian Tudor Hart's analysis, insight and wisdom have never been more needed." Dr Iona Heath, President, Royal College of General Practitioners

About the Author
Dr Julian Tudor Hart was born of medical parents in 1927. His teenage ambition was to become a general practitioner serving a coal mining community developing practical ideas for a future socialist society. After five years as a GP in North Kensington he worked under two famous epidemiologists, Richard Doll and Archie Cochrane. Returning to general practice in a South Wales valley community, he combined clinical work with epidemiological research led by his wife Mary and supported by the Medical Research Council. He has published four previous books and many papers in peer-reviewed journals, visited many countries as a lecturer or visiting professor, and served as an elected member of the Council of the Royal College of General Practitioners. He is an Honorary Fellow of four Universities, a former president of the UK Socialist Health Association, and now president of the SHA in Wales.
